"His Majesty's faithfull Acadian subjects, Inhabiting the Isle of Madame" dated March 8, 1786, 70 heads of families, the founders of Arichat parish, thanked the lieutenant governor of Cape Breton, J.F.W. DesBarres, for the promise of land concessions, the permission to construct a church and school, and the request for tax exemptions. Stephen

A. White, genealogist from the Centre d'Etudes Acadiennes at the Universite de Moncton, identified these 70 settlers in his Cahiers de la société historique acadienne, vol. XXIII, Jan. 1992, p. 4-26; titled "Les fondateurs de la paroisse d'Arichat, Cap-Breton".

René Thériot, son of Joseph Theriot and Marguerite Melanson, born at Riviere aux Canards, the 4 Dec. 1721, baptised at Grand Pré, the 14 th of the same month, married at Grand Pré, 23 nov 1744, to Anne LeBlanc, daughter of notary René LeBlanc and Marguerite Thébeau. Taking refuge at Nipisiguit, in the Bay de Chaleurs in 1761, René and Anne were taken prisoners and taken to Fort Cumberland and then to Halifax. Arriving in Arichat just after the Paris Treaty, René made friends with Charles Robin, according to Charles journal (photocopy CEA 521. 1-1: see page 1769-1) He died between 1806, when he changed his will, and 1810, the date of the register of this document in the county of Cape Breton. René is the ancestor of all the Theriaults of Isle Madame.

2/S Forrest

Simon Forrest, son of Pierre Forrest and Madeleine Babin, born at Pisiquit, about 1724, married about 1749 to Marguerite Gautrot, daughter of Jean Gautrot and Anne LeBlanc. Transported to Massachusetts in 1755, Simon and Marguerite stayed a few years at Weymouth, town of this colony. Returned to Acadia in 1763-64, they settled at Arichat. According to Abbe J B A Ferland (Journal of a voyage on the shores of Gaspésie, 1836, page 416), Simon Forest died 1819, at the age of 95 years. He is the ancestor of the Forests of Isle Madame, Iles de la Madeleine and Gaspésie.

3/P Bauséjour

(B Beausejour)

Paul Godin dit Bellefontaine dit Beausejour, son of Joseph Godin dit Beausejour and Marie-Anne Bergeron, born at Riviere St Jean, married about to Madeleine Dugas, daughter of Joseph Dugas and Marguerite Coste, and widow of Charles Fougere. Their marriage was revalidated at Arichat on 12 august 1771, by Abbe C F Bailly. Prisoner at Halifax in 1763, Paul Beausejour came to Isle Madame soon after, where he married Charles Fougere's widow. According to Placide Gaudet (Genealogies Acadiennes, manuscript at CEA, pp2020-1 and 2), the descendants of his son, Michel, took the name of Bellefontaine, while his son, Paul, kept the name of Beausejour. Boniface Fougere, born of the first marriage of Madeleine Dugas, is "the old Fougere" of whom Edme Rameau de Saint Pere speaks (Cahiers de la SHA, vol 4, #5, april-june 1972, pp207-209).

4/C Boudrot Madoise

C Budro of L'Ardoise Charles Boudreau)

Charles Boudrot dit Madouesse, son of Michel Boudrot and Anne Landry, born at Port Toulouse about 1725, married there about 1754 to Marguerite Dugas, daughter of Abraham Dugas and Marguerite Fougere.

Charles and Marguerite seem to have escaped the evacuation of Ile Royale in 1758, by hiding in the woods. In 1771, they were living in D'Escousse, where Abbe Bailly baptised 6 of their children. It seems they settled at Grand Digue (now Poulamon), in the same parish, because that is where their descendants were more numerous in the 19th century.

5/M Poryere

M Poirier

Michel Poirier, son of Joseph Poirier and Jeanne Arseneau, possibly born at Beaubassin, married about 1756 to Judith Richard, daughter of Alexander Richard and Marie-Madeleine Thibodeau. According to an old story preserved by Placide Gaudet (CEA, 1.22-21) Michel and Judith were in the Fortress of Louisbourg, during the last siege; where their daughter Anastasie was born, in a casemate, and was always known, as a consequence, as Anastasie Casemate. In 1760, they were at Restigouche, and the following year at Nipisiguit. Taken as prisoners to Halifax, they were released in 1763. L'Abbe Bailly baptised 3 of their children in Arichat in 1771. The Poirier line is still strong in West Arichat.

6/A Belfontine

Anselme Bellefontaine

Anselm Godin dit Bellefontaine, son of Charles Godin dit Boisjoli and Marie Melanson, was born at Riviere St Jean about 1738, married about 1766 to Marguerite Theriot, daughter of Rene Theriot (#1, above) and Anne LeBlanc. Anselm's parents were prisoners at Halifax in 1763, Anselm, too, must have been among their 8 children who were also there. From Charles Robin's journal, we learn that Anselm worked with his father-in-law, building boats. He was alive in 1821, when he sold his land to Hippolyte Marmaud, future husband of his granddaughter, Marie Barbe LeBlanc. His only son, Marc Bellefontaine, settled at Grand Digue in New Brunswick, in June 1821. At Arichat, the name of Bellefontaine was continued by Michel Beausejour, whose father (#3) was Anselm's first cousin.

7/R LaBlanc

R LeBlanc

Rene LeBlanc, son of the notary René LeBlanc and Marguerite Thebeau, born at Grand Pre 10 Nov 1731, married at Grand Pre in 1752 to Anne Blanchard, daughter of Rene Blanchard and Marguerite Theriot. Refugees at Bat de Chaleurs, with their brother-in-law, Rene Theriot (#1) Rene and Anne came to Arichat the same way, that is, by Fort Cumberland and Halifax. In 1790, Rene LeBlanc, with his sons, Mathurin and Hyacinthe, his son-in-law, Michel Boudrot and his nephews Joseph and Simon Theriot, obtained a big lot of land at Caribacou (now Port Malcolm), on Cape Breton Island, where they dreamed of founding a new settlement, but the place was not suitable, and they returned to Isle Madame. Rene. He was successful at selling this lot of land on 30 Jan 1811, but he is not on the census of the 29 March of the same year. He is the ancestor of the LeBlancs of West Arichat, Petit de Grat, River Bourgeois, etc.

8/ J Forgeron

Joseph Sauvage dit Forgeron, son of Pierre Sauvage dit Forgeron and Marie Jeanne Pinet, was born at Port Toulouse about 1752, married (1) about 1773, Theotiste Fougere, daughter of Joseph Fougere (#54) and Marguerite Coste, and (2) before 1808, Osite, probably, Osite Henry (#47) and Marie Carret. The Forgeron families were not among the evacuees from Isle Royale after the fall of Louisbourg, but their whereabouts between 1758 and 1771, when L'Abbe Bailly met them in Arichat, is unknown. Joseph and his brothers Jean and Paul, and brother-in-law Michel Boutin (#46), settled at Little Arichat, (now West Arichat), on land they were granted in 1790. Navigator, he died after 4 Oct 1819, the date he sold his land at Little Arichat. Joseph Forgeron's 3 daughters have left numerous descendants.

9/P Forgeron

Paul Sauvage dit Forgeron, brother of (8), was born about 1759, married (1) about 1784, Henriette Boudrot, daughter of Joseph Boudrot and Judith Fougere, and (2) about 1810, Apollonie Boucher, daughter of Honore Boucher and Marie Anne Marres dit La Sonde, and widow of Joseph Fougere. Through their only son, Pierre, Paul and Henriette had many descendants at West Arichat, but at this moment, this line only exists in the United States.

10/ J Forgeron

Jean Sauvage dit Forgeron, brother to (8 and 9), born at Port Toulouse about 1754, married (1) a woman not known yet, and (2) about 1792, Genevieve-Sophie Daigre, daughter of Gregoire Daigre and Marguerite Josephe Henry. He died after 27 March 1821, when he signed away his land in Little Arichat. Jean and Sophie Forgeron's descendants still reside on Isle Madame.

(I did not know the word hypothec, and translated it to "signed away")

11/ J Forrest

Jean Forest, son of Simon Forest (#2), and Marguerite Gautrot, was born at Pisiquit, about Sept 1750, married about 1773 to Modeste Fougere, daughter of Joseph Fougere (#54), and Marguerite Coste. Deported to Massachusetts with his parents, he returned with them to Acadia, and became a builder and long range captain. He probably lost his life, in the sinking of his Schooner "Mary" in 1801. (J P Parker, Cape Breton Ships and Men, 1967, p 98) The descendants of his only son, Jean, lived in Arichat until about 1900.

Deported from the islands later, in 1767, Alexandre resided with his father and sisters at L'Ardoise, from where he moved to Petit de Grat before 1788. Many of the Landry name claim him as their ancestor.

24/ A Landri

A Landry

Alexis Landry, son of Jean Baptiste Landry and Marguerite Gautrot, was born about 1723 at Pisiguit, and married about 1748 to Marguerite Aucoin, daughter of Antoine Aucoin and Anne Breau. It does not seem as if the family was deported, but in 1762, Alexis was listed on the list of refugees of Saint Suliac, in Bretagne, along with his brother-in-law, Antone Aucoin. Alexis and Marguerite were in Arichat on 26 July 1771, when L'Abbe Bailly baptised their son Jean Baptiste. The many descendants of Alexis, in order to distinguish themselves from the other Landrys, use Alexis as their last name, instead of Landry.

Eustache Marchand, son of Jean Marchand and Genevieve Pouget, born at Port Toulouse about 1750, married about 1775, Charlotte Boudrot, daughter of Joseph Boudrot and Joseph Fougere. Eustache belonged to another family who evaded the British soldiers after the fall of Louisbourg.The Marchands were at L'Ardoise, when L'Abbe Bailly visited that village in 1771, but it seems that he he settled in Upper Arichat, near Rocky Bay, soon after his marriage, where he was listed on the census of 1811 and 1813, as seaman and fisherman.

According to legend of Edme Rameaux de Saint Pere, Charles and his family hid in the woods, on an island in the Bras D'Or Lake, in 1758, where "all the dogs were killed, to prevent them from making noise". (Cahiers de la SHA, vol 4, #5, april-june 1972, p 166) ten years or so later, Charles settled at Arichat, where he lived on land that was later expropriated to build the Court House, according to an appeal from his daughter, Eulalie. Jean Hebert settled at the head of Arichat Harbour on a land grant, that included his sons, Joseph and Robert, his sons-in-law, Renaud Vigneau and Francois Maillet, also Simon and Joseph Babin, Jean and Pierre Boudrot. Given the fact that the last four were the sons and sons in law of Francoise Dugas, we believe that this family and Jean Hebert's family were somehow related. By, this, we assumed that Jean Hebert had married, in a second marriage, Francoise Dugas.

He made his living by fishing.

42/ J Burk

J Burk (Bourque)

Joseph Bourg, brother to the preceding person, was born at Port Toulouse about 1727. We could find no evidence that he was married; it could be that he was head of a family comprised of his mother, and (or) his sister Anne, who were registered in the 1767 census with him at Miquelon, also a brother Michel. His parents were originally from Port Royale, settled at Port Toulouse between 1720 and 1722, but shortly after Joseph's birth, they moved to Tracadie, Ile St Jean.
